48	Pedestrian Mall on Silver Street!	Mar 10, 2012 11:14 AM
49	At the moment, I'm not seeing a need for a lot of changes.	Mar 9, 2012 10:04 PM
50	I'm not a big fan of curbs, unless they are soft and rounded, which makes them useless for more aggressive drivers. I think a beautiful sign that describes our "priorities" for downtown - pedestrian & kid friendly, slow-paced, flexible and beautiful. (But dogs only on leash!) We're SO small! The PO/credit union/Laughing Buddha corner needs major attention. We're used to it, but it's butt ugly!	Mar 9, 2012 9:53 PM
51	It is a small town and most folks seems to enjoy the reclusiveness combined with the social when they like / it shouldn't be made into a cookie cutter downtown but something entirely unique to the pulse the heartbeat of our community...	Mar 9, 2012 8:27 PM
52	Tree cleanup & fire mitigation has been one of the most visible improvements in town over the past few years. We continue to remove hazard trees and clean up debris especially from dead cottonwoods. We need to keep permaculture principles and native landscaping in place when making our decisions. Also keep our drought conditions and water access in mind in regards to planting-xeriscaping.	Mar 9, 2012 2:01 AM
53	Maybe: facade / storefronts. Depends. Needs to be done correctly, understated, with design criteria. Careful: public landscaping can be expensive to maintain and keep looking good. Looking bad is not a positive. Best confine this effort to parks.	Mar 8, 2012 4:18 PM
54	I was just in Santa Barabara CA and thinking about downtown design...they have beautiful unmortared brick sidewalks and thoughtfully designed landscaping. I'd love to see brick sidewalks and walkways in Crestone and, given our climate, I'd love to see thoughtfully designed permaculture, native plants, xeriscape, etc. landscaping. Something that will maintain its beauty all year round even as parts die back and something that communicates values of sustainability, beauty, and respect.	Mar 8, 2012 12:05 PM
55	community altar is a horrible idea. Leaving things the way they are is worshipping.	Mar 8, 2012 10:19 AM
56	I think sidewalks are a terrible idea and will destroy convenient parking in front of businesses. I also think making everyone park in a central parking lot and forcing them to walk everywhere is a terrible idea.	Mar 8, 2012 9:42 AM
57	I don't want money to be spent on the town for tourism, which I believe would ruin what we have. Money should be spent on creating and cultivating sustainability so that the community can thrive. Crestone attracts strong, practical and forward-thinking people who want a better life and world. Let's cultivate and celebrate what we have that is different. Let's not conform to what everyone else does.	Mar 8, 2012 8:49 AM
58	Outdoor concert/theater space with facilities. (stage, restrooms and concession)	Mar 8, 2012 8:06 AM

Out door sports area. Biking lanes going to Moffet.

59	1. Sign posts on each corner noting the direction of other businesses (with arrows). 2, Regulations that require property owners to remove old cars and clean up their property - the business owners keep their places looking pretty good, but some of the surrounding residential properties are trashy. I think this detracts from the attractiveness of downtown. 3. All the dogs running loose are unappealing and make people, especially visitors, wary of walking downtown.	Mar 5, 2012 1:45 PM
60	I like the fluid sense of choice and open space. Too many segregated functions and implied "rules" to follow will make the downtown feel controlled and uptight. The first priorities should be improving pedestrian experience with dust/mud control by some gravel or paving and improving the health of the natural environment (prune all trees, regrade disturbed areas, adding lots of plantings in a naturalistic way, limit light pollution.	Mar 5, 2012 10:27 AM
61	Competition is needed to drive out the old energy and bring in the new.	Mar 2, 2012 10:49 AM
